BLUES ARRANGE FOR SHAMBATTLE

One Company to Take Part in "Attack" on Richmond; Two Left to Defend It.

Plans for manoeuvres to be participated in by the entire battalion of the Richmond Light Infantry Blues in attacking and defending Richmond are well under way, and those in command have about arranged to open "hostilities" on the morning of July 4th. Only one or two conditions are to be complied with before the manoeuvres are finally formulated. In the first place it is necessary to obtain the permission of Governor Swanson and Attorney-General Allen, and the expected conference between them and the officers of the battalion did not take place. However, there is no doubt that they will have the permission by the time the manoeuvres are held.

As the troops are not ordered out by the Governor, the manoeuvres are not compulsory, but in view of the fact that the Fourth is a holiday, with Sunday following, each captain expects to take along practically his entire company.

The manoeuvres will consist of an attack on Richmond by one of the companies, with the other two defending it. The company chosen to attack will leave Richmond for Petersburg on the night of the third, and will arrive there on the morning of the fourth. When the two companies meet they will engage in a sham battle. Altogether, in the short period they are out the soldiers will get a taste of real war, for besides the battle and marching there will be a rifle and machine gun drill, castle guard, patrol and guard duties.

BURGLAR SCARE CAUSED BY HORSE

Came Back to Old Home, Fell Into Cellar and Alarmed the Police.

RESCUED WITH DIFFICULTY

Refusing Green Pastures of Country, He Comes Back a Second Time.

Like the cat that came back and the dog that came back, a horse that had been sold to a farmer in Richmond, and which had passed most of its years in the stables of E. Smith, of South Tenth Street, returned for the second time early yesterday morning, and while stumbling about in the dark for its accustomed door, fell down the cellar steps of the Johnston & Company's Paper Box Manufacturing Company, and lay on its back and kicked like fury until he was rescued by several police officers. The bottom of the cellar is about fifteen feet from the surface, and a door closes on the steps about three-quarters of the way down.

Fell on His Back.

Against this fall the animal fell on his back. No one witnessed the accident, but several people heard the rumbling, which sounded as if Topkapi Joe, "Prince Jim" and their famous band were forcing an entrance to the place to rob it of paper boxes.

Policeman Tait heard the sound of crashing glass and falling to the scene, wanted to know in the sternest accents who was below. Another showed him the way, and he reached the scene where the horse's whinny, "Golly gee! Golly Moses!" cried the officer, and then called others to the rescue.

Sergeant Anderson and his famous band of thieves and Toler came up, and proceeded to investigate. The horse was still struggling, and even after being pulled down some more glass. Finally one of the men got down in the cellar, and opening the door, let the horse roll down the remaining steps. He reached the bottom with a grunt, and was helped to his feet. Shaking himself, he looked round, and whinnied his gratitude to the men who had helped him. He walked out, with head high and tail flowing. "Once more he whinnied his thanks."

Broke to City Ways.

This is the second time the old war-horse has returned to the city. He belongs to a countryman in Chesterfield county, who returned for him a few days ago. Not caring for the country life, he has never left the city. So he returned, taking many devious paths to his old home. He is old enough to vote, but has never exercised the privilege, though he seems to exercise all others that accompany the possession of four legs. His years number two decades and four.

The work will require three days in all, and will end to-morrow afternoon. There are 187 members of the class, nine of whom are colored.

Major Enright Back.

Major J. H. Enright, deputy United States marshal, who was one of the delegates to the Chicago Convention of the Third District, has returned to the city. He was an original "Tat" man, and was long an active worker in the "Tat" before leaving for Virginia. He stopped over at Cincinnati to shake hands with Secretary Taft, whom he met in the city. He is a Republican and is pleased with the Republican ticket and platform, and thinks a sweeping victory awaits the party at the polls.

WARNING TO BE HEEDED BY ALL

Dr. H. W. Wiley, Advises How and What to Eat in Summer.

In eight commandments given for the guidance and comfort of every sufferer during the hot summer months, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, food expert of the government, shows how health may best be preserved and the usual summer ailments warded off.

He advises temperance in all things, particularly in regard to stimulants and ice-cold beverages. People should eat one-fourth less than they do during the winter, since the heat energy is one-quarter less than in winter. He advises also against the use of raw fruits and vegetables, as they contain, in most instances, logions of nameless bacteria. Fruit, if eaten, is better cooked, as the cooking process destroys the containing germs. Cereals should be taken in the over-indulgence of food drinks and frozen relishes, he says; and on hot days no beverage below sixty degrees in temperature should be taken.

Cut Out the High-Ball.

As the weather grows hot, the glass of pale, he comes out in strong warning. He says that oxidized alcohol is nothing but heat and should more alcohol be used than is oxidized, the user gets poisoned.

Here are Dr. Wiley's commandments:

1. Eat one-fourth less in summer than in winter.

2. Eat meat in moderation. Select the lighter meats.

3. Banish all alcoholic beverages.

4. Eat most largely of cooked fruits and vegetables.

5. Drink nothing below sixty degrees in temperature, and drink sparingly.

6. Be careful to seek the society of cheerful friends.

7. Practice moderation in open air exercise.

8. Don't fret; don't worry.

Dr. Wiley shows particularly the danger of liquor drinking when the mercury is trying to break out through the top of the tube. Young men who are often stuck for the soda, according to Dr. Wiley, should wear the health commandments in their hats.

MANN CRITICIZED FOR TWO VOTING

Temperance Leader Silent on Taxing Pullman Cars Where Liquor Is Sold.

WHAT THE RECORD SHOWS

Was in Charge of Byrd Bill and Allowed Defeat of Temperance Amendment.

There is considerable comment in political circles and in newspapers over the fact that although Judge William Hodges Mann was in charge of the Byrd liquor bill in the Senate last winter, when various amendments were being offered and voted upon, the record shows that he failed to vote upon one presented by Senator E. C. Folkes, of this city, placing an annual license tax of $400 upon dining and other cars where liquors are sold. The record shows that the amendment was lost by a tie vote of 17 to 17. Had Judge Mann voted, the amendment would, of course, have been adopted or more decisively lost. It is shown by the Senate Journal of the day on which the amendment of Mr. Folkes was offered, that Judge Mann was in the Senate chamber in charge of the measure; that he offered a number of amendments just prior to that of Mr. Folkes, and that for some months later he may have been so engrossed, Mr. Garrett moved to pass Judge Mann's motion and to print the bill, and upon this the Notwithstanding Senator is recorded as voting "no."

It will be recalled that Judge Mann resigned his attorneyship for the Norfolk and Western Railway during his last contest for the Senate. His strong temperance views, and the fact that many of his friends are saying that he was never very much in favor of temperance, have been a basis for the comment upon his failure to vote on the Folkes amendment.

What the Record Shows.

Here is a copy of the proceedings of the Senate relative to the Byrd bill on Friday, February 28, 1908, as taken from pages 564, 565 and 566 of the Senate Journal of that day.
